

Memories

A woman has gone into a snow-white forest to look at an old carving she had put on a particular tree when she was younger. Her blond hair touched her shoulders as it blew in the soft wind. She had a fluffy black coat on which was just below her knees. Her red scarf looked like a ribbon floating in the wind. She had a pale white shirt that was warm and comfy.

As she stood looking at her tree, she put her hand on the love heart carving, rubbing her finger around the heart. As she did this, she could remember how she played around this forest as a child. However, the woman wasn't alone. She had her black husky dog with her. Her dog had a blood red collar around its neck that matches the lady's red scarf.

The trees were bare but still standing tall. The woman was left standing in the forest staring at the heart carving that she had put in her young days.

By Cullen